[illegible]

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot:

The undersigned, administratrix of the estate of Arthur Given, late of Corinna, in said County, deceased, respectfully represents that the goods and chattels, rights and credits of said deceased are not sufficient to pay his just debts and charges of administration by the sum of seven hundred dollars.

Wherefore your petitioner prays your Honor to grant her power to sell, by license at public or private sale and convey the whole of the following described real estate of the deceased, (including the reversion of the widow's dower therein,) as the residue would be greatly depreciated by a sale of any portion, viz: The late homestead of the said deceased and all the real estate of which he was seized at the time of his decease, to satisfy said debts, expenses of sale, and charges of administration.

Said real estate is the same described in a deed recorded in the Registry of Deeds of said County.

The torch of war was kindled at the Blanchery patch, Lewiston, Friday night, and a contention arose between two skirmishing armies. One party of the belligerents proceeded to the police station to order the arrest of their contestants, and found that they had been preceded by the others, who had come on a similar errand.

Some days ago Marshal Quimby of Lewiston, had notice from the City Marshal of Bath, to arrest one French, of that city. Saturday afternoon he found a man and woman on the square, the man trading horses, with some rough conversation going on He advised the removal of the woman, and was moving the man away to disperse the crowd, when one called "What are you doing with French." This developed the fact that French was wanted, and he was arrested and sent to Bath.

ATTACHMENT TO NEWSPAPERS. Some one who seems to know about the relation of a good newspaper to the family, writes as follows:

The strong attachment of subscribers to well conducted newspapers is fully confirmed by publishers. "Stop my paper" words of dread to beginners in business, lose their terror after a paper has been established for a term of years. So long as a paper pursues a just, honorable and judicious course meeting the wants of its customers in all respects, the ties of friendship between the subscribers and the paper are as hard to break by an outside third party as the ties which bind old friends in business or social life. Occasional defects and errors in a newspaper are overlooked by those who have become attached to it through its perusal for years. They sometimes become dissatisfied with it on account of something which has slipped into its columns, and they stop taking it; but the absence of the familiar sheet at their homes and offices for a few weeks becomes an insupportable privation, and they hasten to take it again and possibly apologize for having it stopped. No friendship on earth is more constant than that contracted by the reader for a journal which makes an honest and earnest effort to merit its continued support. Hence a conscientiously conducted paper becomes a favorite in the family.

THE WAGON. But few people are aware that they do wagons and carriages more injury by greasing too plentifully, than in almost any other way. A well-made wheel will endure common wear from ten to twenty-five years, if care is taken to use the right kind and proper amount of grease, but if this matter is not attended to they will be used up in five or six years. Lard should never be used on a wagon, for it will penetrate the hub and work its way out around the tenons of the spokes, and spoil the wheel. Tallow is the best lubricator for wood axle-trees, and castor oil for iron. Just enough grease should be applied to the spindle of a wagon to give it a light coating; this is better than more, for the surplus put on will work out at the ends and be forced by the shoulder bands, and nut-washers into the hub around the outside of the boxes. To oil an iron axle-tree, first wipe the spindle clean with a cloth wet with spirits of turpentine, and then apply a few drops of castor-oil near the shoulder and end. One tablespoonful is amply sufficient for the whole. Let the fifth wheel of the carriage alone, if it grates, tighten the king-bolt, but keep grease off from it.—Chautauqua Farmer.

PRESENTS FOR GENTLEMEN. A lady asks a Western editor, "What are the most suitable gifts to offer to a gentleman?" and is immediately informed. Braces, replies the Western editor, are very nice presents, "they can be made of fine canvas, worked with a trail of flowers or berries, and lined with silk." Ink-stands, pen-wipers, are also pleasing, especially when composed of quilted satin, "with some scented powder scattered between the inner and outer lining, and the initials of the gentleman worked on the outside in point lace, or in gold braid, or embroidered." They are "very neat." Long knitted silk purses for silver are "a elegant present." Better yet are "laundry cushions, with printed lists of gentlemen's clothing, which you can get printed at any office at small expense." They are very convenient, and "save writing a list each week"—so it is to be supposed they will be useful to the many unmarried gentlemen who do not keep house. The editor supposes his lady correspondent to be anxious about. "A clothes bag of canvas and zephyr for soiled linen is a novel as well as a useful present." The truth of this statement seems to be indisputable. Finally, "embroidered handkerchiefs, with initials always please the masculine mind, as they combine the useful with the ornamental." The gifts here mentioned are simple, varied, inexpensive, useful and, with the exception perhaps of the "braces," pleasingly sentimental. Not one of them is liable to injure the possessor On the whole we are inclined to think that an Eastern editor could not have drawn up a list so fresh and stimulating.—New York Evening Post.

"What statue is that?" asked a stranger as he gazed upon the marble pile at the West end of the capitol grounds, the other day.

"That, sir," said a by-stander "is the Monument to Peace."

"Peace!" exclaimed the stranger. "Are not those two women at the top?"

"Yes; History and America" was the reply.

"Well, who ever heard of peace where there were two women?"

July 12, 1878.

THE REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Republican delegates of Penobscot County are to assemble in Convention today to complete the Republican ticket by the nomination of the several County candidates. It is not our duty or desire to anticipate or indicate the choice to be made in any case, and we have full confidence that the Convention will have due regard to the great importance of selecting candidates who shall be not only thoroughly qualified and worthy of public confidence, but also those who will command the strongest support at the polls. Our County ticket should be made to add strength to the Republican Campaign in Penobscot, and that consideration should outweigh all minor questions. We look to the staunch representatives of Penobscot Republicanism to give a strong impetus to the campaign now fairly opened, and to take measures for thoroughly arousing the voters of the County to the duty of energetic effort against a combined and unscrupulous opposition.

The body of representative men to assemble here to-day, have it in their power to cause a mighty development of the strength of Penobscot Republicanism, and their duty will not be discharged by simply going through the formal proceedings of nomination. There is earnest, vigorous work to be done throughout the County, and the trusted representatives of the party who will gather here to-day should make it their duty to organize for such systematic and effective effort as will insure the polling of every Republican vote. We trust that the Convention will resolve itself into a rallying committee for the whole County, and that it will consider as among its most urgent duties that of taking practical measures for promoting in every possible way the vigor and success of the campaign. When the Republicans of Penobscot go to work in earnest they carry all before them, and now is the time to move with full power "upon the enemy's works."

RAILROAD EARNINGS. The Commercial and Financial Chronicle gives the gross earnings of twenty-one railroads for the month of July, which show an increase over the receipts of the corresponding month of 1877 of $619,626. These lines are largely the grain carrying lines of the West. Doubtless much of this apparent gain is due to the fact that during the month of July, 1877, many of them were affected by the general railroad strikes. The most notable increase of earnings is that presented by the returns of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, which shows gross earnings during July, 1878, amounting to $339,060, against $197,142 in July, 1877—an increase of $142,958.

The gross earnings of the same roads for the seven months ending July 31st, 1878, were $34,149,958, against $30,483,799 for the corresponding period of 1877—a gain of $3,666,154.

The gross earnings of sixteen other lines for the month of June, largely Southern lines, show an increase of $235,029 over the same month in 1877, the total for 1878 being $4,862,668. The Philadelphia and Reading road, which has of late been making a rather unfavorable showing, reports an increase last June of $299,340 in a total of $1,498,058. The gross earnings for the same roads for the six months of 1878 ending June 30th, were $17,984,352, against $17,165,072 for the corresponding period of 1877.

The New York Tribune of Monday, August 12th, says: "The National Bank circulation, as reported from Washington on Saturday, has declined $1,934,454 since July 31, and the withdrawal of bonds deposited for circulation reached $3,646,000 last week. When a country is 'famishing' for more paper money, and can take all it wants, but yet persists in surrendering a part of what it has, the famishing must be imaginary."

EX-SPEAKER GROW'S EXPOSURE OF THE GREENBACK FALLACIES.

Ex-Speaker Galusha A. Grow was one of the leading candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor of Pennsylvania, and he has been the first to take the field in behalf of his successful competitor, Col. Hoyt. In his speech at Oil City last Saturday, Mr. Grow made a plain, straightforward appeal to the masses for sound money and the honest payment of the public debt. It comes from one of the leaders of the Republican party, in a State where the Greenback craze has made thousands of victims, and it means that the Republicans of Pennsylvania have placed themselves squarely on the side of honesty and good faith.

This speech is the key-note of the Pennsylvania campaign, and was admirably adapted for the purpose, being full of terse, homely sentences that go straight to the marrow of things. What, for instance could drive the truth home quicker to the average citizen than this comparison of the coin dollar and the greenback.

The paper reads on its face, I promise to pay real value; the coin declares on its face, I am real value. The coin dollar needs no indorser. The paper one is worthless without it. The coin dollar runs through the commercial world by its own inherent strength and bears upon its face its real value. The paper dollar has not strength enough to stand alone, and bears upon its face only a promise which, if its fulfillment is to be indefinitely postponed, is as worthless as the rags of which it is made.

Or this brief answer to the people who want greenback mills in every county.

The mere fact of coining money by the Government, or the stamping of engraved paper by its printing presses, no matter to what extent, does not thereby make money plenty. For however much the Government may have in its vaults, it can pay out or put in circulation only the amount of its actual expenses. If its actual expenses are $1,000,000, that is all it can pay out, and it collects in taxes and returns to its Treasury during the year that same amount.

Here is a short sermon on the "war prices" which so many are regretting:

Flush times, as they are called, come not from increased coinage or additional printing, but from increased demand and consumption of the products of labor.—The flush business times of the war were not because the government issued greenbacks, but because it paid annually over a thousand millions of dollars for labor and its products instead of, as now, less than three hundred millions. The sudden demand caused by the war for almost everything increased the consumption, and thereby enhanced the price. War prices can be continued only by continuing the war that produces them.

And here is a terse description of what statesmen of the Butler school call "under-consumption." After depicting the "over-consumption" or extravagance which has resulted in bankruptcy and ruin, Mr. Grow says:

The statesmanship which excuses such a state of things by calling it under-consumption, is akin to that which claims that money worth nothing makes a country rich. There is a remarkable instance of under-consumption in the case of the Prodigal Son, when he fed upon husks; but it was the necessary and inevitable result of extravagant and riotous living.

The ex-Speaker attacks the Democratic party as the exponent of a policy oppressive to the workingmen of the country. He says:

It is neither wise statesmanship nor real economy, in times of great depression in business, for the Government to stop all outlays for necessary and indispensible public works. Not that the Government should create a necessity for expenditures, but when that necessity exists, why not give to unemployed labor the benefits resulting therefrom in the times of its greatest need, especially as the Government would have the advantage, in such times, of cheapness in doing its work? This kind of statesmanship was most conspicuously illustrated by the Democratic party in the last Congress, and upon such a record it appeals to the people for a renewed lease of power.

With this pungent sentence he meets the Free Traders:

With the land filled with unemployed labor, who would suggest the importation of more laborers as a remedy for business ills? Yet to bring the products of their labor to supply our market has the same effect upon unemployed labor as would the importation of the laborers themselves.

One of the most important portions of this address is that in which Mr. Grow disposes of the Greenback proposition to tax Government bonds. In discussing this subject, he calls attention to a decision of Chief Justice Marshall, the application of which to this question will be fresh to some of our readers. The decision was that bonds and notes of the United States were necessarily exempted from taxation by State and municipalities, because "State Governments have no right to tax any of the constitutional means employed by the Government to execute its constitutional powers." To these words of the great Chief Justice Mr. Grow adds:

Local taxation of Government bonds and notes is the same as the taxation of its credit. In times of danger, were it constitutional, hostile communities could, within their respective jurisdiction, tax its credit out of existence.

As for taxation by the General Government.

There would be no such thing as the sale of a bond bearing 4 per cent. interest if it was subject to taxation. What advantage, then, would it be to the Government to pay 6 or 7 per cent. interest and then collect back 2 or 3 per cent. in taxation? It saves in the rate of interest about the amount it would collect in taxes, and the cost of collecting the tax.

With this one quotation we can close this series of brief extracts:

Will the Nation redeem its plighted faith and pay, in the day of its safety and power, as it promised in the night-time of its disaster and peril?

This is the sum and substance of the whole matter. This is the whole controversy. The Republicans of Pennsylvania, heretofore sometime wavering in their support of hard-money theories, place their campaign squarely on that question.

THE REAL DRIFT OF GREENBACKISM.

[From the Boston Journal.]

At one time the Greenback creed was simply opposition to currency contraction and specie resumption. But the contraction of the currency has been stopped and specie resumption is assured. Then the "fiat" money foolery claimed the attention and the advocacy of the Greenbacker, and a few of them are now making themselves objects of mild curiosity by asserting that the Government can stamp any number of pieces of paper with marks indicating that they are $10, $20, $100, and thereby make them worth that amount of labor or its products.

But the number of Greenback advocates who devote themselves to the simple advocacy of this absurdity is very small. What do we find in the majority of the Greenback organs? Denunciation of bondholders and capitalists, and appeals calculated to array labor against capital. What do the speeches of the most popular orators in the Greenback movement contain? Bitter invectives against "gold bugs," bondholder, capitalists and the owners of industrial property. What do they invoke? War between capital and labor. In Maine, the other day, at a Greenback convention, the mention of Kearney inspired a spontaneity of applause which the presence of the party candidate for Governor would not have evoked—and why? Simply because, better than Peter Cooper or Solon Chase or General Sargent, he represents the element which will give the Greenback ticket the most of its votes. We repeat and emphasize the assertion that the main drift of the speeches being made in aid of the Greenback movement are directed against capitalists and the men who possess the money invested in the industries of our Eastern States. The Greenbackers, the labor agitators, the Internationals, the Socialists and Communists, to use the language of Denis Kearney, have pooled all their issues and have united in a common crusade upon property owners, employers and capitalists. They do not disguise this fact, and if they attempted to do so it is so plain that a wayfaring man though a fool could not err in discerning it.

The phrase 'facilis descensus averni'—the descent to perdition is easy—has almost become a truism. The example of the rapid descent of the Greenback movement will make it go to so. The movement had its inception in a fallacy. To fallacy was added heresy, and so it has gone on from bad to worse until now it represents a combination which not only menaces the prosperity of the country but its peace.

The Commercial of last evening copies from the Portland Argus an editorial in which that paper approvingly quotes from Gen. Plaisted's recent letter, and says "he plainly presents the financial issue "upon which the Republicans and Demo"crats differ, the General very squarely "taking the ground held by the Demo"crats." Having earned such indorsement as that, Gen. Plaisted certainly should not complain that he has been "read out" of the Republican party, by any one but himself.

There comes a suggestion from a Maine paper that Senator Blaine and Gen. Butler hold joint discussions on the currency question. There wouldn't be but one such discussion. The chaff of the General's heresies would be so threshed out at the first trial that he would ever after have a wholesome dread for such an honest money threshing machine as the Senator is proving.—Boston Journal.

Senator Blaine writes privately in strong terms of the encouraging outlook in Maine. Victory will come, nevertheless, only by hard fighting and thorough organization. The Greenbackers and Democrats will practically coalesce all over the State before the election is over."—Philadelphia Press.

From a Camden despatch printed in the Commercial last evening we should judge that young Perry had been using the telegraph to cover up his dissection by Mr. Nichols at the Lincolnville meeting. We are only surprised that there was enough left of Perry to write a despatch.

Corn Solvent.

This Remedy is for Use when the Shoe is off, during the Night.

This simple and wonderful remedy has been thoroughly tested and has never failed in any case, when the directions have been carried out. It is magical in its effect upon all dead matter, which nature cannot, unaided throw off. Hard corns at once become soft under one night's action of the Solvent, and (no matter how sore and painful they may have been over night) can be rubbed off the feet in the morning, and "soft corns" which come between the toes also are removed and all soreness taken away. While Bunions (which are not corns, but the result of a body formed between the bones of the joint) can be reduced in size and all shooting pains removed by using the Solvent two or three times a week.

The Solvent is thoroughly harmless and no one need fear to use it, and all persons can procure it upon the express understanding that it is no nostrum, but the result of educated chemical and scientific research.
